Project description:

EU, with respect to human rights at its core, supports a number of projects in Georgia, as well as partner countries, that focus on different aspects of human rights and dignities. This project is a partnership of civil society organizations of the three countries to prevent torture (mental or physical) and inhuman or degrading treatment of citizens. Through diverse activities and sub-grants, the project works to:

- Establish and strengthen prevention mechanisms of redress for the victims of torture;
- Improves capacities of relevant professionals and civil society organizations in documenting torture
- Provides comprehensive tailor-made rehabilitation services to the victims of torture and their family members.

Expected results:

- Victims of torture and their family members have better access to comprehensive rehabilitation services;
- Civil society organisations and national human rights institutions have greater capacities in monitoring incidences of torture and inhumane treatment in closed institutions;
- State officials are more efficient in early detection of torture;
- Physicians and lawyers have the capacities to properly document incidences of torture via Istanbul Protocol;
- Legislation and policies with regard to torture and ill-treatment are improved;
- Public awareness on issues related to torture is increased.
