Project description:

The Partnership for Public Administration Reform at Local Level in Georgia (P4PAR) aims to enhance civil society's role in monitoring PAR implementation. It leverages the National Association of Local Authorities of Georgia for local advocacy. The project focuses on three key areas: developing a monitoring system involving civil society, facilitating dialogue among stakeholders, and ensuring civil society's involvement in PAR commitments. Implemented over 36 months, the project involves the National Association of Local Authorities of Georgia, Civitas Georgica, and Management and Development Solutions Hub. Activities follow a coherent chain, aligned with project methodology and call for applications guidelines. The inception phase involves developing a detailed plan submitted to the donor for approval, setting the project's direction for subsequent years.

Expected results:

1. Effective and efficient system for monitoring the implementation of municipal commitments in PAR by active involvement of civil society organizations in the monitoring process.
2. Effective communication between the Association, civil society organizations (CSOs), municipalities, and the government regarding municipal commitments in PAR.
3. Civil society organizations help municipalities in realization of their commitments in PAR
